In-thread experience

Conversion
point

A messaging journey starts when your customer joins the conversation through an entry point and continues as they interact with the in-thread experience and reach the point of conversion.

Conversion points are key milestones that propel your business towards success, such as getting a customer to schedule an appointment or buy a product.

The conversion points ultimately serve to achieve better results for your business outcomes.

How to create a messaging journey

Step 1: Identify business outcome & conversion point

Use the customer lifecycle framework to define the conversion points that you want the customer to achieve within the in-thread experience in order to propel your company towards its business outcomes.

Business Outcome: Increase dog grooming sales

Pro-tip: customers may start interacting with a company in any step of the customer lifecycle, and participate in more than one messaging journey across their lifecycle.

Step 3: Craft a valuable in-thread experience

Design the experiential flow thinking about how you can solve for the customer's needs and move them towards the conversion point.

Pro-tip: help customers get what they want quickly and without deviation. Consider adding benefits to give customers reasons to opt-in and come back.
